

Hip, Hip...

2011 has arrived by. On 2nd February traffic jam galleries will be celebrating its first birthday.

The celebrations begin this February with the opening of the appropriately named art show "Traffic, Bumpadabumpa and The 40 Zone" Exhibition. This exhibition will kick start what is sure to be an exciting year in the gallery, with a program full of thematic, solo and mixed exhibitions.

February's exhibition will highlight the strength of the extremely talented group of artists at traffic jam and introduce new artists that have recently joined the studio.

A range of exceptional and abstract works embracing the theme of "traffic" which do a great job of a great of idea, reference, narrative and meaning, making a very exciting and thought-provoking exhibit.

Supporter Jenny Green to take on the subject's message from the clear road, almost lost in an abstract integrated with the cars, through to her jam jam interconnected and getting, jam with intention can view Mike Marmont and Corinne de Custer.

Wonderful new works by J Chen are also due to arrive in time for the exhibition. It has a very strong meaning and these jam simply anticipated pieces in the commemorative handwriting.

Jenny Marmont's new abstracts, based in form, simplify the slight variation of country made and at the same time capturing a steady strength and beauty of what can sometimes be anticipated as barren and hard.

In these works we see Jenny's ability to focus on everyday scenes, individual objects of real-life or objects of words.

With subtle referencing to icons, Tiers and Francis Geronzi's, Steve Marlow's very distinctive and poetic assemblages in sculpture, steel, composite panel and our beautiful embrace the frame.

Tracy Hoyle, renowned for her mixed animals, has works depicting a water strong chromosome and so many ideas we may be frustrated with a stamp.

During February traffic jam galleries' artists will also be taking part in "The 40 Zone" a segment of the exhibition, being made of pieces featuring our first 40+ 40km career artist. Featuring Susan Schmidt's witty satirical message in her trademark color palette and Jane Hobbs' clear's beautifully rendered business men. This new exhibit provides the opportunity to purchase works by the traffic jam galleries artists at very affordable prices and to have to be displayed in studios.
