Katherine Wood's September opening for her body of work, Synergize, has ended but her work is still being shown on the exhibition side of the gallery until the 22nd of September.

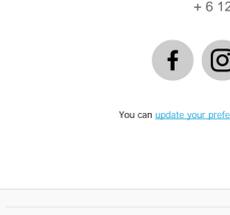

"Sometimes I feel that a universal divine intelligence creates the paintings I do. That I can step outside of myself and that I am a co-creator. I now ask for help with every painting I do to let the 'magic' happen. In this trust and faith energy flows through into each unique piece. I can almost tangibly feel this energy while I paint. This is energy transferred. With that said, I transfer power, perseverance, abundance, stillness, calm, relativity, love and an endless stream of good energy that can then be "re-transferred" and hence a cycle of synergised energy created" Katherine Wood.

This week tjjg has arranged a series of work to be delivered to its corporate partners Spiers Ryan and Collin Biggers & Paisley. Over 50 different artworks by ourrepresented artists have been exchanged in corporate locations in Sydney, Melbourne and Brisbane.

New works from Edgar Schilter, adding five new works to his series of work depicting hyper realistic charcoal, ink and graphite drawings of miniature yachts in jars. Other works by Schilter feature detailed building architecture alongside a series of jarred and bagged objects. Schilter is currently featuring at tjjg.

Meredith Woolnough's coral series has arrived and is currently being featured on the mixed side of the gallery.

Kathryn McGovern has a new exhibition starting on the 29th of September and opening on Saturday 1st of October, 3-5pm
